

At best, BPL will create an electronic fog on the high-frequency spectrum, requiring higher power to complete communications than presently required. This violates the spirit of the regulation that requires the lowest power practicable in order to minimize interference with other stations.